ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First, I would like to thank my advisors Dr. Mike McCurry and Dr. Scott Hughes. Their assistance has greatly improved both the scientific quality and syntax of this work and they helped me navigate the world of igneous petrology. Bobbie, Melissa and Connie along with many others in the main office have smoothed out the rough spots and without them, I might never have gotten paid. Special thanks to Diana Boyack as she has provided invaluable assistance to me, far above and beyond what she needed to do.

Many others have impacted my stay here at Idaho State over the past few years. Arron Pope fed me too much coffee and the occasional undercooked meal but let me split some of his wood pile and has been a good friend, conversationalist, and pool shooting adversary. Jamie Blair provided hunting and fishing companionship and introduced me to many new fishing holes and some cool cats here in Pocatello. Duane DeVechio is a great friend and helped to widen my musical horizons plus he always had some Olympia in the fridge. Kate Pickett and Dan Narsavage are also great pals and I wish them continued happiness.

Others here at ISU warrant special mention and I’m sure to forget to list a few names: Kaleb Scarberry - disk golf and high adventure, Butch and Diane Wheeler - Snake River fishing and some good eats in Blackfoot, Brian Hennings – Worms and rabbit stew, Mary Hodges – championship canoe rowing and Bannock Pass tufa, Rudy Ganske – petrology discussions and general banter, Songqiao Chen – expert in the lab (but please ware some safety glasses), and Rodger Rapp and Nagendra Singh – office mates over the years. I would also like to thank Dr. Jim Lia and Dr. Jagoda Urban-Klaehn for their support over the years. Thanks to a few other friends from my “living room” including Greg Bary, Dan Dawson, Paul Grayson, Don Lopez, Jim Olsen, Kevin Pitkin and Dennis Pullman.

I would be remiss if I didn’t mention some of the folks from New York that have shown continued support over the years including Jason and Walt Strawser and the rest of the “Coon Hollow Gang”, Richard and Ellen Luce and the Clearing Corriedale Sheep and Wool Co., the entire Lynch family and all the old friends from Lamoka Lake and my taxidermist, Dave Fish.

Finally, I would like to thank my parents. My father taught me, among other things, that with a good education, hard work and perseverance, one can achieve great things. He was a great fishing partner and my best friend. My mother was one of the happiest people I’ve ever met and, unless you were a snake, was kind and gracious to everyone. I wish I could grow plants as well as she did. I am saddened that they were not able to see me finish this segment of my educational odyssey and I miss them.
